

Segregation Law Repealer Given Maryland House

State Senate Votes, 20 to 9, to End 'Jim Crow' Rule

By the Associated Press.
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 16.—The final disposition of a bill to repeal a Maryland law requiring segregation of Negroes on public conveyances rested with the House of Delegates today after passage by the Senate, 20 to 9.

Senate indorsement had been virtually assured for several days, so that yesterday's action was little more than a formality, but opposition in the House was expected to be stronger.

Gov. O'Connor recently called for enactment of the repealer.

In the final roll call in the Senate, there was no debate. One lone Senator, James W. Hughes, Republican, of Cecil, rose to explain his "aye" vote.

He questioned "whether this action will prove to be an advance of which Maryland will be proud or a retrogression from which we shall all taste grief."

Potomac Program Details Amplified By Army Engineers

The cost of the Potomac River flood control, water purification, power and recreational facilities program, calling for postwar construction over a 20-year period, would be $235,720,000, it was revealed by Army engineers today, as they amplified details of the project published in The Star on January 3.

Details have been sent to interested parties who will testify at the forthcoming hearings of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. Should the report meet the board's approval, the program will be sent to Congress.

The report, which is now being studied by the Army Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, also stated that benefits to navigation would result from the retention of silt in the storage reservoirs, thereby eliminating the periodic dredging of silt now deposited in the Washington Harbor.

Power Benefits Seen. In addition, it was stated that water power benefits would result from the sale of electrical energy to contiguous market areas in the vicinity of Philadelphia and Baltimore as well as the District and vicinity and in the Potomac River Basin.

Plans call for an extensive network of 14 dams and reservoirs to be built during the 20-year period. The average annual benefits of such a program would be $15,712,000 or an approximate $2 outlay for a $3 gain, according to the War Department's Office of Division Engineer, Middle Atlantic division. The annual cost of the long-range construction program is estimated at $11,800,000.

The report also lists the following: $73,000 in pollution abatement; $253,000 saving in flood destruction; $289,000 in recreation facilities; $170,000 in additional water supply; $69,000 in improved highway facilities; $13,000 in navigation improvement.

14 Reservoirs Planned. The plan calls for the 14 multiple-purpose reservoirs to be constructed in sections of the watershed, including the Riverbend site on the Potomac above Great Falls, the Chain Bridge site on the river near the upper limit of the District and the Bear Island site on the Potomac in the vicinity of Great Falls.

The Chain Bridge project calls for shore boundary acquisition, as well as construction of navigation locks. Army engineers said the locks would allow recreation craft to proceed from Washington to Harpers Ferry through the three lower reservoirs and parts of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal. The engineers also gave assurance that special study had been made so that construction of the project would not detract from the scenic attractions and historical landmarks there.

The report estimated that the flow of water over Great Falls between the proposed Chain Bridge and Riverbend dams will be at least equal to that greater than the present natural flow 70 per cent of the time. "During the summer and fall months, when visitors enjoy viewing Great Falls, the regulated flows during the daylight hours would be about one-third greater," the report said.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Kutsch moved to Prince Georges County about 20 years ago and was active in county politics before passage of the Hatch Act. He is a former justice of the peace and was foreman of the 1940 county grand jury.

He was educated in Baltimore schools, obtaining his first job with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. there. In 1917 he joined the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railway as an electrical supervisor, remaining with the firm until it went out of business in 1935.

He was in the insurance and real estate business until 1937, when he was appointed assistant sales engineer at Greenbelt. In December, 1937, he was appointed to his present position.

He is married and has three children. A son, Boatwain's Mate, (first class) Wilmer Kutsch, 22, has just returned home after spending two years overseas.

An Arlington Circuit Court order for the sale of the Country Garden Market, 901 North Columbus street, Alexandria, to the Fairfax Super Market was entered yesterday by Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Under the order, the Alexandria store, one of three markets formerly operated by Samuel Shanker, will be sold to the Fairfax Super Market for $40,000 to satisfy certain creditors. All of the Shanker markets are in receivership, under the operation of Arthur Zinnman.

The court order states that the $700 monthly rental on the Alexandria store has not been paid since August 1, and that the owner of the building has entered suit to repossess the property. The order also stated that another suit has been filed by a fixture company to repossess fixtures and equipment in the store.

The court order further decreed that the receiver is to pay an internal revenue levy from proceeds of the sale and to place the remaining merchandise from the Alexandria store on the shelves of the two remaining markets.

Hershey Report On Deferments Called 'Unfair'

Purveyor Says Only 6,770 U. S. Workers Under 30 Got Stays

Edgar F. Puryear, Government deferment chairman, charged today that Selective Service Director Hershey's report to Congress yesterday on the number of deferred Federal workers gives an "unfair and distorted picture" of the Government's actual deferment record.

Citing Gen. Hershey's report that 265,909 Government jobholders qualified for military service were deferred as of December 1, 1944, Mr. Puryear said that, excluding the War and Navy Departments, only 6,770 Federal workers under 30 now held occupational deferments.

Majority Over 30. "Gen. Hershey's statement," Mr. Puryear said, "fails to make clear that all except 45,000 of these deferred workers are over 30 and reclassified because of that fact and in many instances at the special request of the Selective Service System itself."

"Out of the 45,000 under 30, only 6,770 are in the 73 Government agencies and the remainder are in the War and Navy Departments where they are employed in arsenals, navy yards and other direct war production."

"Among the 6,770 are Federal Bureau of Investigation agents doing work in protecting and safeguarding the Nation is critical, as well as physicists, chemists and aeronautical engineers."

Few Given Deferments. Mr. Puryear said his Regional Committee on Deferment of Government employees is constantly turning down applications for deferment and in the near future, practically no one will be left in the Government under 30 who is physically qualified for combat.

As for the men over 30, he said, the agencies asked for their deferment but the insistence on the Selective Service System to bring the Government in line with private industry.

"Gen. Hershey has given an unfair statement in that it presents a distorted picture of what is actually happening in the Government," declared Mr. Puryear. "The Government's deferment record actually is far better than that of private industry."

Taverns Get Warning On Midnight Closing In Prince Georges

Prince Georges County's taverns today were on notice by the County Liquor Board to close their establishments at midnight on Saturday or run the risk of being declared out of bounds by military and naval authorities.

The request to institute the midnight closing hour was made by the board at a meeting with the licensees yesterday in the Upper Marlboro Courthouse.

Assurances that taverns would comply with the request were given in an announcement after the meeting by Lawrence Whalen, president of the County Hotel and Restaurant Association, that members of his organization would put the plan into effect beginning tomorrow.

At present liquor establishments holding on-sale licenses close at 2 a.m. every night, while Washington taverns close at 3 a.m. on weekdays and midnight on Saturdays.

Declaring that several taverns in the county are in "imminent danger" of being placed off limits by Military District of Washington authorities, William H. Brooke, a member of the Liquor Board, quipped that the county's taverns may place all taverns in certain sections of the county out of bounds unless conditions are corrected.

Mr. Brooke said military authorities told the board last week that most of the conditions about which they complained arose out of the two-hour differential in the Saturday night closing hours of taverns in the District and Prince Georges County.

While admitting that the request to close at midnight Saturdays was put on a voluntary basis, Mrs. Mary Browning, board chairman, declared that if any complaints are made concerning an establishment which refuses to institute the midnight closing hour, "it will be taken into consideration when the owner of the tavern is brought before us."

Owners Held Responsible. Mrs. Browning also warned the dealers that the board will use its power to suspend or revoke licenses to force licensees to comply with the law in maintaining orderly establishments.

"The owner of each liquor establishment will be held responsible for the operation of his or her place, and excuses that the bartender has violated the law without the knowledge of the owner will not be accepted," Mrs. Browning asserted.

Mrs. Browning also said that "by closing at midnight, we mean just that, to institute the midnight closing hour, and continuing to do business on the inside."
